IV. The following setting is very oppressive. It was described by someone whose first day at work didn't go well. In (100 – 150 words), change the setting below into a liberating and cheerful one reflecting its good impact on another character who was very successful on his first day at work:

"The air hung heavy, thick with dust and the faint stench of decay. The narrow streets were choked with shadows, even at midday, as if sunlight itself refused to linger. Crumbling buildings leaned inward, their cracked walls whispering of neglect and forgotten lives. Windows were barred, doors bolted, and every sound—a distant cough, a hurried footstep—seemed to echo with fear. Inside, the rooms were dim and airless. The ceilings pressed low, trapping the heat and the silence together. The flickering light from a weak bulb cast more gloom than glow, stretching long, uncertain shapes across the peeling wallpaper. It was a place where even the air felt watchful, where time dragged its feet, and escape seemed not only impossible but unthinkable". (4 Marks)

V. In (150 – 200) words, invent a character of a translator who owns the following tools: Dictionary, laptop, Noise-canceling headphones (for focus), and translation software. You can freely add to these tools, resting on all the categories of the character creation checklist. (6 Marks)
