I. Write short notes (30 – 50 words) on the following: (6 Marks)

a- The importance of research and imagination to memory
b- Associative memory
c- The importance of writing diaries
d- Tips for making a diary credible

II. In 200 – 250 words, write a preface to ONE only of the following:
a) Your first novel/book
b) Your MA dissertation

Your preface should include ALL parts of a preface structure. You can invent as many details as possible provided that you sound credible. (8 Marks)

III. In no more than 250 words, write your diary of a memorable day in your life following the structure of writing a diary, using the "Dear Diary" formula, integrating specific time and place details as well as a short dialogue that includes some sort of conflict. Your diary should reflect sensory details. (8 Marks)

V. In 200 – 250 words, use memory to revive a scene when you invited your friends to dinner, and you found out that you forgot your wallet! Revive this memory reflecting your embarrassing situation and integrate sensory details to make the memory more vivid. Try to 'show' these feelings rather than stating them by dramatising part of the scene with dialogue – even though you might not be able to remember what happened exactly. You can simply invent some details. (8 Marks).
